dinner

music

PROBLEM

you moved somewhere new. now what?

Eighteen to thirty year olds in transition — interns, new grads, travelers, new-to-the-city folks — land somewhere with zero community.

group chats don't convert

Meetup feels corporate

Bumble BFF is dating-adjacent going solo is the default

30%

of 18–30 year olds report feeling isolated after relocating · American Psychiatry Association

SOLUTION

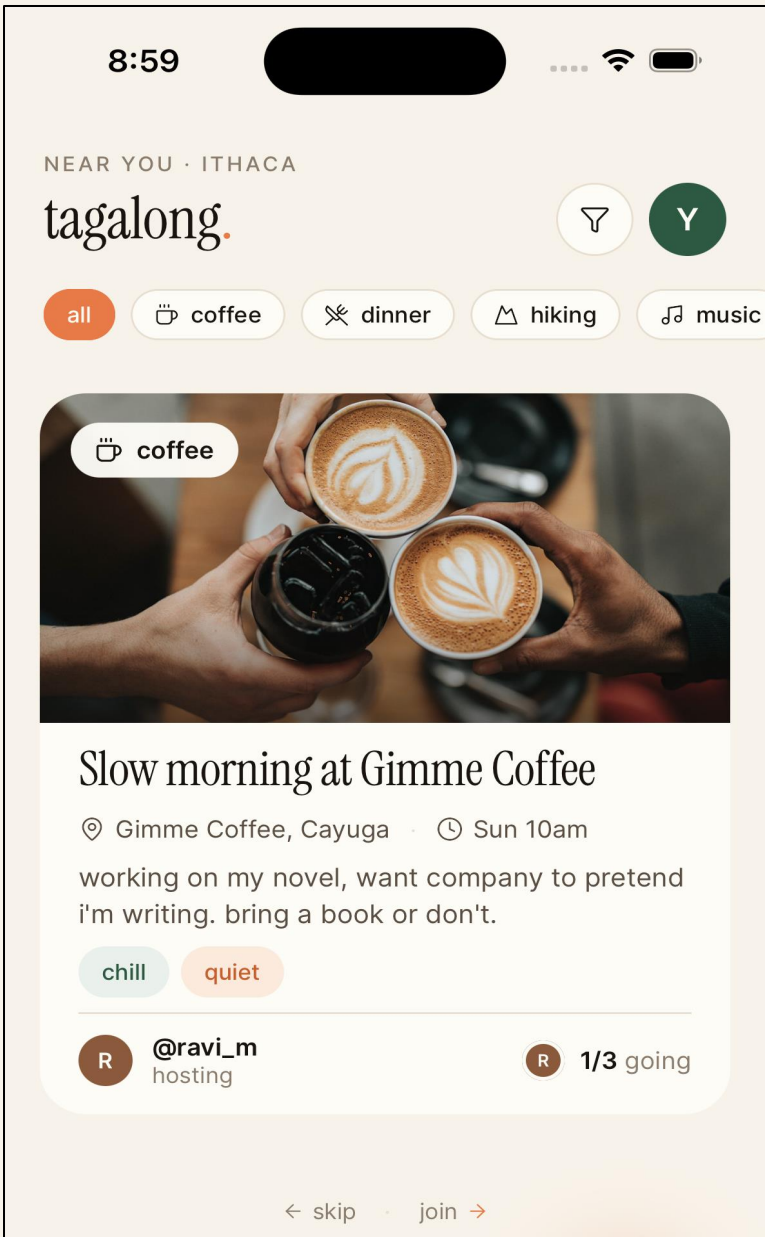

post an activity. swipe to join. meet IRL.

no chat to build, no profile to fill out.

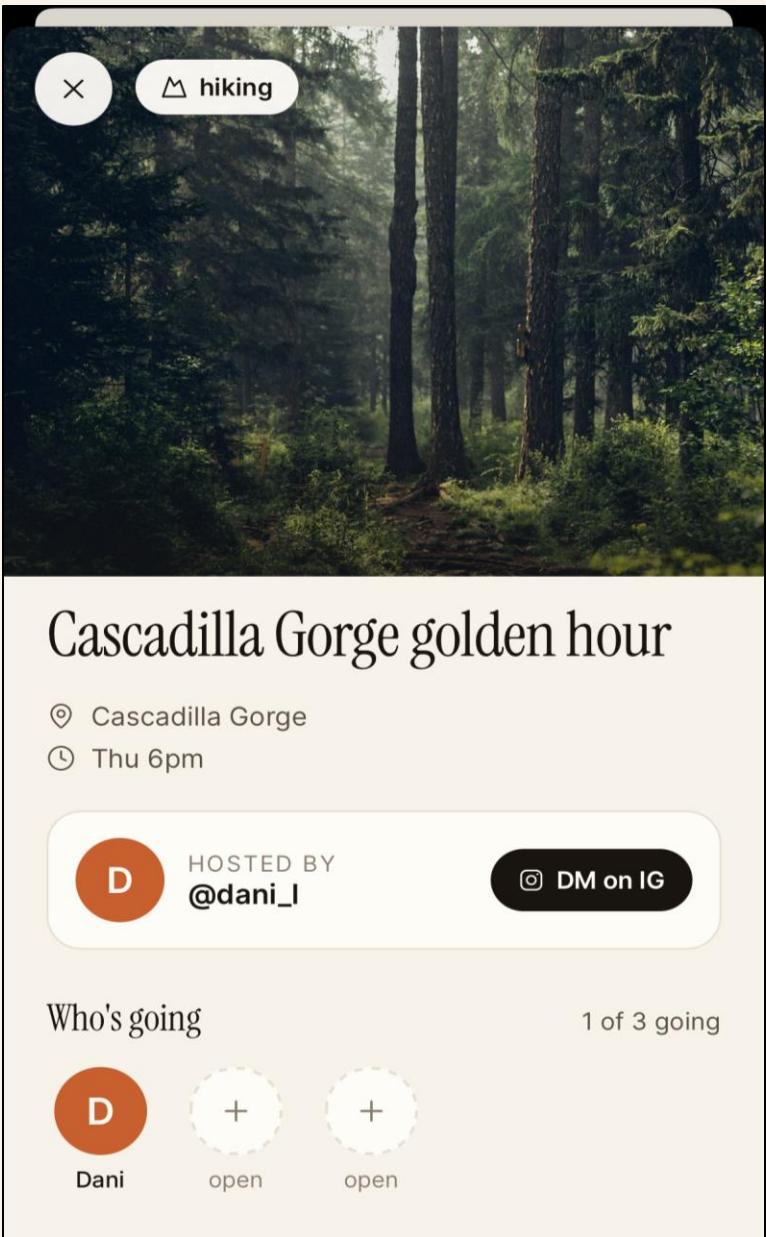

1 post it
five fields, ten seconds

2 swipe to join skip · maybe · i'm in

3 DM on IG

UNIQUE VALUE

first app to swipe on the activity, not the person.

APP	UNIT OF DISCOVERY	SETUP FRICTION	VIBE
tagalong.	the activity	zero — IG deep-link	IRL-default, low-stakes
Meetup	scheduled groups	account + RSVP	corporate, older
Partiful / Posh	invitations	already need the friend	closed guest list
Bumble BFF	a person's profile	photos + bio + prompts	dating-adjacent
Facebook Events	pre-made events	no ad-hoc formation	no discovery layer

the only app that makes “want to grab coffee at 4?” a three-tap action.

BUSINESS MODEL

how it makes money.

01

Promoted local listings

Moosewood pays to appear as a suggested dinner spot in Ithaca feeds. Performance-priced, native to the swipe unit — no banner ads.

INNOVATION

three new primitives.

01

swipe on the activity

Inverts Tinder. The thing you're joining — not a profile — is the unit of discovery. Photos of places, not people.

the what, not the who.

02

the maybe button

Most apps force yes or no right now. We let you park it in a Collections “maybe” list and decide later. Commitment without the pressure.

decisions, deferred.

03

Instagram as the DM layer

We don't rebuild messaging. We lean on the social graph every 18–30 year old already has. Zero onboarding, zero chat infrastructure.
